King Roy's try is an classic 2d platformer with a custom 16-bit graphics style inspired by old games and a unique soundtrack composed by the game itself. The game comprises a world filled with environmental hazards and traps, all designed to discourage you from completing this challenging journey. You, as the 'Knight of Trye' must continue on your quest through 48 levels to fulfill the ancient Knights' honor. In order to complete the game, you must accomplish a series of feats, such as leaping over pits of spikes, deadly lasers and other pitfalls. If you fall from a gap or fall into a pit, you'll be respawned at the edge of the screen, and you must repeat the level. As you progress, you'll find that each level consists of three sections, culminating in a special challenge for the most skilled and courageous players. If you like the King's try game or just want to enjoy a challenge, you'll love playing this amazing adventure!

CreatorCrate is a turn based, party game where you play as Commander, an epic sci fi race with three supreme commanders to battle. Support your commanders by equipping your best gear and use your commander's special attacks to dominate your opponents. To spice things up there are many variations of attack combinations like the more normal linear or the faction specific pirate skill. All characters are in a team with three Masters that teach them their powerful attacks. There is only one rule to fight for victory: it's the one who captures the most booties!

When you hit level up you unlock more equipment. There are several types of equipment for each commander. Let's take a look at Commander Titan in the provided image. We've got the helmet - Elite Commander's Stencil - plus additional equipment that will give her big boost in battle. That includes the Plasma blaster, Heavy Plasma Shot and Battle armor. The Jupiter Jr. Ice Temple, on the other hand, makes him able to attack from distance with cool resource drops such as the Commando Jump (that
